Most of you know that Deadwood is home to the Deadwood Food Coop, a 40+ year old institution that provides us with natural food items at "buyer's club" prices, i.e. much reduced from the store. We source from local businesses such as The Bread Stop, Hummingbird Wholesale, Pasta Plus, Surata Tofu and Glory Bee. We also order from Azure Standard, out of Dufer OR, for more general natural food grocery items. Buying in bulk allows us to split large amounts of flour, beans, rice, peanut butter, etc, all while saving big bucks! Once you make the Coop a part of your life, you'll find that it's a great habit to have! Call our reigning Coop Queen, Cathy Barr for more info 541 964-5371.

Inspired by one of the most creative cooks I know, Deadwood's own Jairo LeClaire:

Cucumber Lemon or Limeade

- Peeled cucumbers
- Fresh lemon or lime juice
- Fresh spearmint
- Fresh ginger root
- sugar to taste
- water

OK, like many of you, I don't measure, so you are on your own ...

I put everything through my juicer and add the sugar and water after.
If you don't have a juicer, you can blend it and run it through a food mill or sieve.
Refrigerate. So tasty and probably really good with vodka. I'll let you know ... !!!

Plan on it~October 18th!!

The Local Food System Ordinance of Lane County will have a hearing in Lane County Circuit Court, 125 E 8th, Eugene, on Monday, September 15 at 2pm. This is our second time in front of Judge Carlson who ruled against us the first time. WE'RE BACK, better than ever!!! Please plan on attending. We need to pack the house to let the judge see that the people are serious about exercising our right to vote, using the initiative process.

Reminder:
The Ordinance will;

- Recognize our right to grow and distribute food, free from GMO contamination
- Protect our right to save and share seed, free from patents
- Place the rights of the community over corporate agribusiness powers and privileges

The information in last month's ditto regarding climate was interesting and informative. The last sentence in the article was, in my opinion, an editorial comment although posed as fact....."The possibility that in our current era human activity is causing global warming is a hotly debated and so far undecided issue." In response I submit the following information:

"So the newest study to examine scientists' views on global warming is, in some ways, old news: published in the journal Environmental Science and Technology, it draws on a survey of more than 1,800 climate scientists to once again document "overwhelming agreement" on those two main points....." 97.5 percent of actively publishing climatologists, believe" human activity is a significant contributing factor in changing mean global temperatures"; the 2010 paper in the Proceedings of the Natural Academy of Sciences that surveyed 200 scientists who've published "prolifically" on climate change, 97 to 98 percent of which agree it's happening; and the 2013 survey led by Skeptical Science's John Cook (a co-author on this new study), which reviewed 12,000 peer-reviewed climate science papers and found that 97 percent of those that discussed the cause of climate change attributed it to human activity."

Although I view few concepts including scientific ones as absolute fact, there is often reason, practicality, and common sense that come into play in the formation of opinion.

If you are convinced that 7 billion of us and our machines are not heating up this very finite little planet, then I would suggest you consider ocean acidification as a "potential" problem.

Dear friends,

We're 46 days away from the largest climate mobilisation the world has ever seen. Our massive climate day of action already has 350,000 Avaazers committed to taking part. This is huge, but it's not yet enough. We need more buzz and more people to ensure world leaders see that the demand for climate action has hit a tipping point. And we have just the plan to make that happen.

We can make our passion infectious, to motivate people with what's worth saving from climate change and worth getting out in the streets to stand up for. There's an all star video crew standing by to turn this powerful story about all the things worth saving from the impacts of climate change into an amazing viral video that we can use as an organizing tool to get even more people inspired to join us in this historic day of climate action.

All we need is all of us. This powerful video requires real, inspiring moments from people around the world. And there's no group better to provide footage for this than us. We're spread across every corner of the globe, and we demonstrate every day that there is beauty and hope even as we work to create the more just world we want. So take a few minutes to think about what you feel is #worthsaving from climate change and why you are called to stand up in this global day of action. Then click the link below and share your short clip to be included in the #worthsaving climate video:

<https://secure.avaaz.org/en/worthsaving21/?bYof:Obb&v=43592>

Here are the basic steps to share your video clip:

1. Find an old video clip that you love or shoot a new one. You don't have to film anything new if you already have something. You don't need to edit, narrate, or add any fancy visuals (though if you want to you should!). We're looking for real moments that show the beauty and power of humanity. A moment that moves you will move others.
2. Upload your video to YouTube (info here on how to do this)
3. Email worthsaving@avaaz.org with the YouTube link to your video

Recently, President Obama told the New York Times that when it comes to climate change: "With public opinion there's nothing I cannot do, and without public opinion there's nothing I can get done." Our political representatives across the globe are not yet convinced that enough people are concerned about climate change. This massive day of climate action on September 21 is one of our best opportunities to show the world's most powerful leaders that the public stands with them for ambitious climate action. For that, we need the climate movement to have a growth spurt. We need more people than ever before to demonstrate the rising tide of demand for action.

Polls show that most people believe climate change is a serious threat, but our politicians have yet to feel the heat from a people's movement that will force them to act. This video will be a central part of a global media strategy including massive subway ads, online ads, celebrity engagement and media partnerships to help inspire everyone to march on September 21st and begin the momentum for major shifts in how our leaders protect our planet.

Help show people what this fight is really about and take some time to submit a short video clip about what in your life is #worthsaving from climate change. All the information to get started is in the link below:

<https://secure.avaaz.org/en/worthsaving21/?bYof:Obb&v=43592>

Avaaz was started on the belief that people are the superpower that makes change possible. Ordinary people sharing their dreams, their fury, their bold acts is what has always moved others to action. Together, we can make something that touches and inspires others to do more than they ever have before.

With hope,

Nell, Joseph, Iain, Nataliya, Ricken and the whole Avaaz team

Our massive day of climate action on September 21 can show a groundswell of demand to the world's most powerful leaders. If we can make our passion infectious. Help create a viral video tool that can motivate hundreds of thousands into the streets.
