Meditation ~ Deepak Chopra

Sit quietly for 3 to 4 minutes...

Observe your breath...

Put your awareness in your heart...

Ask yourself three questions:

Who am I?

What is my purpose?

What am I grateful for?

Don't worry about the answers,
just ask the questions.

Your life will move you into the answers...

The rest of your day will be really nice.

Summer is a time for friends and strangers visiting Deadwood, and it's forests and streams. Fun is utmost, safety utmost, and awareness ties these together. In emergencies call 911. Non-emergency incidents, call Deadwood Neighborhood Watch (see below). Leaving on vacation? Set up auto light schedules for your home, blinds/curtains leave as usual (open or semi open), put a hold on mail and newspaper delivery, and have a friend move your vehicles often. Be sure pets and farm animals are looked after on a daily basis.

To report incidents, call Maryanne 964-3099, or Marina 964-3497.

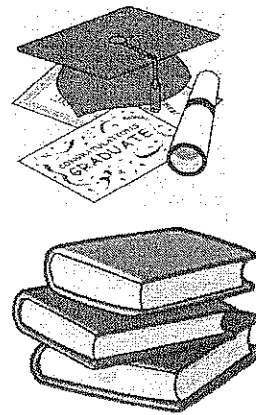

DNW meets every 2nd Thursday of the month, at 6:30 p.m., Community Center, Deadwood.

It is an unjust system that allows environmental need to be subservient to corporate interest. With one hand, the Lane County Commissioners asked Governor Kate Brown to declare our county in a state of "drought emergency"! Then, with the other, prepares to help two Eugene companies — Delta Sand & Gravel Co. and Knife River Corp. — secure extra Willamette River water for their concrete mixing operations.

"It's really important that we manage the water coming off the main stem of the Willamette to the benefit of the community," said Lane County Commissioner Pat Farr.

Mr. Farr's comment indicates that he believes that what benefits business will ultimately benefit the community. We have seen time and time again, that this "trickle-down" economic mindset more often results in untold damage. It's well past time that the environment's/community's interests are prioritized above that of corporate business.

A recent letter from Steve Causey (now calling himself A.K.A) was sent "May 25, Hell Time" as he called it. He said, "communication from home is a shot of light and freedom, did I mention a breath of sanity?"

You don't have to have known A.K.A. that well to give him "a shot of light and freedom". Drop him a line from D'wood.

THE LONGEST BRIDGE

There is this place down in Mexico where Elaine & I have traveled various times. There is this bridge, about 400 yards long, which the Mexicans claim is the longest bridge in the world. They tell us this with a laugh and a smile. It turns out that one of the time zone lines passes directly through the center of the bridge, hence travel over the bridge takes over an hour in crossing time.

Perhaps the longest bridge I have gotten to travel in my Spiritual Journey has been my identity, according to my Creator. Way before I became a follower of Jesus, I used to love the song "Amazing Grace". It's a beautiful song of transformation, and who isn't attracted to transformation in their lives? There is a line in the song that goes ".....that saved a wretch like me." I resented being called a wretch, and for years I would not sing that line, but would substitute the word soul, as in "....that saved a soul like me."

"I once was lost...", as in I believed I was OK with my Creator because I was a "pretty good guy", who did a lot of good things, and I was better than average in all the major areas of the 10 Commandments. Conclusion: I was OK and need not worry about my future life. The long journey across that bridge to believe I am who my Creator says I am: a soul made in God's image, yet warped by corporate and individual sin to the point that I cannot, of myself, ever have right standing with my Creator, nor be able to dwell in His presence. Nothing I can "do" in this life will ever be good enough to make myself acceptable before my Creator. Oh, how my mind and flesh battled against this Truth! I traveled many a side road in the belief that I could pick myself up and become right (have acceptance--- Salvation) if I just tried harder, cleared my mind and meditated more, got purer, let go more, got my energy cleaner, ate purer, and so on and so forth. God's Word tells us over and over; it will never work!

May God bless you in your journey across that long bridge! "For by Grace you have been saved through Faith, and that not of yourselves; it is a Gift of God, and not of Works, least anyone should boast." Apostle Paul, Eph 2: 8-9

A couple of Eugene teens, Kelsey Juliana and Olivia Chernaik resorted to a lawsuit to force Oregon lawmakers to reduce carbon emissions and help forestall climate change. But Judge Karsten Rasmussen said he lacks authority. When the elected officials refuse to act, we are told that our recourse is in the courts. Mixed messages are being sent. We want to encourage our youth to engage in solution oriented actions. We want them to help us find solutions to the problems created by previous generations; those they will inherit. Then, when they do, a Judge shuts the door in their faces. I've no doubt that these young women are not so easily dissuaded. They will continue to fight for fairness and justice. But what about our response? Are we really willing to accept that environmental rights shouldn't be protected in our courts? And further, that 'We the People' lack the power to require our government and legal system to protect the welfare of the people and the planet? Check out Community Rights Lane County CommunityRightsLaneCounty.org We believe community members have the right to protect what we hold dear.
