Free Program

Families on a tight budget report that the cost of healthy groceries is their biggest barrier to making healthy meals at home. Food skills, like smart shopping, can help overcome that barrier. Cooking Matters at the Store is a free program of FOOD For Lane County and OSU Extension SNAP-Ed that empowers families to stretch their food budgets so their children get healthy meals at home. During the 2-hour tour, participants are empowered with four key food skills: reading labels, comparing unit prices, finding whole grain foods, and identifying ways to purchase produce. Cooking Matters at the Store will end in the $10 Challenge, an activity where participants use the skills they've just learned to buy a healthy meal for a family of four, for under $10. Please register today at <https://www.eventbrite.com/e/cooking-matters-at-the-store-florence-tickets-63386704339> or by contacting Beatriz at 541-283-5120.

New research study: "While the cattle industry is repeatedly accused of being the main culprit for increased global methane emissions (and a leading cause for climate change), a new study shows that the fertilizer industry is the root cause." The study goes on to say that this industry uses immense amounts of natural gas for the production of ammonia and urea used in its fertilizers which are primarily applied to prosude plant-crops, and emits more methane than most other industries combined.

CALL FOR SUBMISSIONS

Thank you to James Webb for regularly submitting original content to the Ditto. We need more! This community is full of talented and interesting people, and the Ditto should be a showcase of that. Have you written a poem lately? Would you like to initiate a community discussion? Do you draw? Do you take photographs? Have you discovered a great new gardening or housekeeping tip? Do you have a manifesto? How about a story from your past? What are you thinking about of late?

Submit to deadwoodditto@yahoo.com.

(All ditto submissions should go to this email address or to the box at the store. Ditto deadline is the 26th of every month.)

the new curmudgeon

contemporary classical music disrupts the harmonic order and was once considered sinful (missing the mark). in recent times this discordance emerges as a deliberate attempt to promote false intellectualism and reinforce an ego concept of oneself as possessing superiority over those whose tastes are too simple to understand. this disharmony seems to represent the confusion prevalent in today's society. often understanding comes like the first delusionary flash of sun on a winter's morning. albert e. said; "what most of us learn is a collection of prejudices which are fed to us with a porridge spoon before our eighteenth year". maybe i'm an unlikely hiker and i always seem to dig up more snakes than i can kill, but then nobody shakes a tree with no fruit. silence can never erase the truth (uh oh) nor all tomorrows ever change a yesterday. but is that really true? can the future impinge on the past? it always will...you can bet on it! it's difficult to be time's unwanted stepchild. time loves only those it fosters: it's children, it's heroes, it's toilers. so what drives your "lesson"? sometimes it's extreme...Butterfly waits until Pinkerton appears...forcing him to witness! but better one-eyed than stone blind. in our present system you can elect but you can't select. we are caught between the guidance of unwise men and the obedience of fools. so often conceit is the last refuge of a scoundrel, but ultimate authority is retained by the light of conscience and not by who holds the scepter!
